

Talking Points: what out-of-classroom learning experience should your school offer? Hate it when you can't talk back? Well, you can with Young Post. Have your say and share with students around Hong Kong

Compiled by Sam Gusway June 01, 2016

Alexander Chan, 17, Tin Shui Wai Methodist College

I would love to have busking for an out-of-classroom learning experience. It allows us to gain confidence since we have to perform for a crowd that is very close to us. By interacting with people who stop by we would know more about the neighbourhood and community. And the most important thing is that we would be spreading happiness during the performance, no matter kind of entertainment we are doing. This would be a very good experience for students since we are always just focused on learning facts, and rarely have time to take a look at our city and all of its different faces.

your say letters

Monday, May 30, 2016

MTR conduct a worrying sign

The MTR is like a zoo these days. People barge in as soon as the train doors open, and push others out of the way as they try to grab a seat. I think this is a worrying sign.

It might seem like a small thing, but this kind of behaviour can reduce the quality of life in Hong Kong. If local commuters keep competing for seats that they don't really need, they will end up like mainlanders who are known to be rude and pushy.

I hope Hongkongers will always give their seat to those in need, like the elderly and disabled.

Ivan Lam, Tin Shui Wai Methodist College, 5D

